I'm a final-year Computer Science undergraduate with beginner-level, hands-on experience building full-stack applications, paired with several years of practical social media management and content strategy experience. For my final-year project, I built and deployed a database-driven chatbot that gives students conversational access to academic information. Alongside my technical growth, I've led communications for my department's computing association and organized activities as a student leader. Right now, I'm looking to join a team where I can keep growing technically while contributing real, proven strengths in content and digital communication.
